Dear Mr. Schmitten,

It makes me sick that there are so-called "dead zones" where there are no fish in our oceans. Don't let Bush weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. I support sticter regulations for cleaner oceans.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Overfishing and habitat destruction have all led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans. It is imperative that we restore the health of our oceans for the earth, for our present population, and for future generations. The delicate balance of an ecosystem must be preserved for the overall health of our planet's environment. The destruction of ecosystems leads to imbalance, and imbalance leads to death.

As the saying goes, "Pride goeth before the fall," and it is hubris in the extreme to assume that we can anticipate the long-term consequences of our actions should we fail to protect our oceans. Another famous saying suggests, "An ounce of prevention [is better than] a pound of cure." Better to be conservative now than desperate later.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Our neglect and abuse above the water line is evident to the observant masses on our planet. Let's not ignore preserving our planet's ocean life as well.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Ocean habitats, which include coral, sea grasses, sandy bottoms and rocks, all provide fish with the food, shelter, spawning areas and nursing grounds that are essential to their continued survival. The various habitats that are essential to fish survival are collectively called essential fish habitat.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Overfishing and pollution, along with Navy communications, are killing the animals of the ocean and turning the oceans into unimaginably vast water deserts devoid of life.

Please help preserve the ocean for future generations.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Tuesday night my wife and I were commuting home and listening to "All Things Considered" discussing the US Committee on Ocean Policy findings and recommendation to establish a Federal Ocean Agency. If their research is accurate then how can we entertain weakening existing essential fish habitat guidelines? I would urge you not to weaken them.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Specifically, I encourage you to suggest these prescriptions for better ocean health:

- Protect fragile ocean habitats through the use of protected areas and other tools;
- Transform failing fisheries into sustainable ones to guarantee safe and abundant seafood;
- Reduce dead zones by curbing polluted runoff that creates lack of oxygen and kills marine life;
- Enforce conservation laws to protect ocean wildlife and essential ecosystems;
- Protect our shores from oil by maintaining a moratorium on offshore oil and gas drilling;
- Explore ocean ecosystems by doubling federal investment in ocean science, exploration and education over the next 5 years;
- Reform ocean management by coordinating the hodgepodge of laws and agencies responsible for ocean protection;
- Enact adequate safeguards on aquaculture sites to protect marine ecosystems.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I am deeply concerned about the health of our oceans and fisheries. The NOAA and the Pew Oceans Commission have both stressed the growing problems. I understand that the administration is considering proposals that would weaken existing ocean protections in favor of commercial enterprises. This is short sighted policy and can lead only to permanent harm to our oceans and eventually to our economy and standard of living.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Our oceans no longer sustain as much life as they used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and poor management have all led to an alarming decline in the health of the oceans.

Please work to maintain current protections so my children and their children may enjoy the beauty I enjoy so much.

Thank you.

I sailed all over the world while in the Merchant Marines 30 years ago, and the oceans were in trouble back then. The Mediterranean and the Gulf of Mexico and the South China Sea were cesspools then. It hasn't gotten any better. We need more regulation, not less.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The level of seafood consumption (an corporate greed) in our world today is being felt already. When do we act? When it is too late. What scares me is that that time is approaching quickly.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I grew up on the north shore of Boston at a time when countless families made a living fishing just off the coast. These livelihoods have been decimated as surely as the stock of healthy fish species. Contributing reasons are large-scale, international commercial fishing conglomerates and the off-shore pollution that ravages the shallow waters along the Atlantic seaboard.

Again, I urge you, do not allow further weakening of fish habitat to occur now.

Sincerely,
John Cuffe

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Overfishing, habitat destruction, pollution, and poor management are among the factors that have led to the decline in ocean life.

It has come to my attention that special interests are working to convince the Bush administration to weaken our already ocean protections. These special interests have only their own immediate financial well-being in mind and care nothing for the long term sustainability and health of our ocean life.

I urge you to please move to protect essential fish and sea life habitat. Strengthen and enforce our existing guidelines, not weaken them!

Sincerely,
Judi Luthy

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

My husband and I live a block from the sound, already our community is being forced to deal with an oyster company who wants to set up business to close to the shore. Relaxing the boundaries that are already in place puts an economic strain on communities who are then forced to deal with the glut of businesses that want to use the ocean for their own interests.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I've watched as the ocean has been changed as I have lived both in New York and Florida over the last 54 years. The reefs right on the beach on the atlantic side are all dead. The fishing industry's catching smaller fish in smaller numbers. they have to go further out expending more fuel to bring in ever smaller hauls. The gulf coast have regular beach closings due to a total lack of oxygen in the water. This in turn causes massive fish kills of juvenile fish which further depletes the stock.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I absolutely believe that our oceans should be protected to the absolute fullest extent humanly possible. This is a no-brainer. I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. YOU are the powerful one here, not Mr. Bush. Use your power. And be proud of your decisions. Know that you've done the right thing by your grandchildren and mine.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As a scuba diver and lover of the oceans, I have become increasingly alarmed at the incredible decline in our worldwide fish stocks. As this problem is not "viewable" to most persons, the fisheries have been allowed to continue to bring species to the brink of extinction. The seas and oceans are the bedrock to the food chain. To jeopardize this would be disastrous. The average caught swordfish is HALF the weight it was 20 years ago. We must push for sustainable fishing practices around the world. We must show leadership and hold accountable those countries that ravage the oceans in an irresponsible manner. To try to save a few jobs at the cost of endangering further our fish stocks makes no sense. Instead, we must find a way to transition into healthy fish farming and conservation. There is so little education on this issue it is appalling!

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I recently wrote to the maritime explaining some solutions to help control some of the seas with debris...such as sinking old ships.

It was my best belief that we can re-utilize these ships and the few that cannot be re-furbished then maybe think of ways to use them as barriers for sea habitats. Perhaps you may like to consider speaking with them, as their concerns are very much at times your concerns as well...ocean a graphics' if you will, helping each other with the same concerns helps us all in joint efforts, and just consider how lucky the "fishes" could be then! If I made you smile then my letter has still made a point. Thanks so much for your time in reading my note. Keeping in touch again someday I'm sure.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

More and more animals and fish are dying of diseases because of pollution problems and stress related to overfishing. What goes around comes around and we end up eating these diseased fish.

Please let our oceans recover. Do not lessen fish habitat guidelines and risk our lives in the end!!!

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. There is a need to have tighter regulations on fishing in our oceans and stricter penalties for over fishing and killing of protected species. We are fishing more than the fish are producing and the end result will be extinction of many species in the ocean. We also need regulate the pollution of our oceans from boats and the exhaust that they produce. Fishermen also use to be able to go out and catch an amount worthy enough to go home on in a week but now it takes about a month or more to get anything worthwhile to bring back. This is definitely a telltale sign of a decline in ocean life.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

The fragile ecosystem which exists in our oceans cannot sustain a concentrated assault of the type the Bush administration seems to employ constantly.

Please work instead to preserve and not to harm this irreplaceable resource.

Sincerely,

Thomas Petrone Jr.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Please continue to protect our oceans and maintain the existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Our small-scale (no pun intended) fishing operations here in NJ and around the coastal US depend on the protection of spawning, nursing and shelter grounds for a healthy, steady supply of fish. Our ocean is important to us here, both economically and as a source of beauty and wonder. I hope you will do your utmost to support and protect this ecosystem.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

>From every ocean and lake there are mercury advisories.

For centuries we did not know that the garbage, effluent and chemicals that were dumped into the ocean were destructive.

In the ignorance of those days there may have been excuses for the destruction of habitat and for allowing too many fish to be taken to sustain population.

We no longer have that excuse and I urge you to every effort at your disposal to protect habitat and fish from this degradation.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

We urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. In fact, We'd like to ask you to push for further protections, particularly for whales and dolphins, who are being severely affected by sonar, as well as by pollutants. We have a sacred responsibility to the world we live on. We further urge you to think seriously about the future, and to take courageous action against the short-sighted and greedy people who don't care what is left for future generations.

Sincerely,

However, you are failing your responsibilities and my children are going to pay the price. I say "you" because you are in a position to make a stand, a public stand. You and I both know that the current administration have turned the clock back so far on environmental managment plans that we find ourselves in a destructive phase not seen before duing my lifetime which began in 1966. Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I respectfully urge you to continue protecting our oceans, and possibly even to increase their level of protection. For the health of our oceans and ourselves, we cannot afford to weaken existing fish habitat guidelines any further.

I already find it confusing enough to determine which types of ocean-caught fish and other seafood are environmentally responsible to serve my family for dinner. Meanwhile, many varieties of farmed seafood have been deemed too risky due to their high content of likely carcinogens.

As more and more species' populations spiral into decline due to the degradation of the world's oceans, our meals no longer include as much seafood as we would like. This trend is unnatural, as fish and seafood are known to have numerous nutritional benefits.

Again, I urge you not to weaken any existing guidelines protecting ocean fish habitats. Thank you for considering these thoughts.

Please do not not weaken the existing essential fish habitat guidelines. We keep reading how polluted our oceans are becoming, such that we are constantly being warned about the dangers of eating ocean fish. Please help bring back clean water for our marine life, rather than allowing it to become even more polluted.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The alarming number of reports of "crashing" fish populations, fish kills, reef deaths, and so on make it all too clear that we should be looking at ways to increase our efforts to protect the marine environment instead of searching for ways to make it easier to over-exploit what was once thought to be a limitless resource, but has proven anything but.

It is absolutely imperative to protect the various habitats essential to fish survival.

We have more hard science about oceanic habitats than any time in history! The destruction of oceanic areas that provide food and spawning grounds for fish is criminal and negligent...one of the world's most important food source is in jeopardy.

Every effort must be made by you and your department to maintain the highest of standards in conservation. Any other action is unacceptable.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans. They are so crucial. Life began in the Oceans, they cover two thirds of the Globe, how can they be viewed as un-important?

Please do not vote to weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. If anything they should be strengthened.

Eco-systems are a balancing act... Damage the plants, you harm the fish, harming the larger fish which either leads to less to harvest, or drives dangerous fish and sharks closer to shore in search of food. People never connect an increase in shark attacks with the destruction of a coral reef, but they are linked.

We must keep our Oceans as close to Nature's design as possible.

Thanks for listening.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I recently heard of ocean study just released , I think by Concerned Scientists, that stresses that our oceans are in much worse shape than originally thought. I have seen the slop in some areas of the ocean, and the damages caused to reefs and shores. There are less fish than 10 years ago. Without cleaner water and and cleaner air, the survival of life in this part of the world and in other parts of the world is threatened. Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Our oceans no longer sustain as much life as they used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and poor management have all led to this alarming decline in the health of our oceans.

Incredibly, special interests are working to convince the Bush administration to weaken existing ocean protections.

As the National Marine Fisheries Service is asking the public to comment on whether to protect essential fish habitat, we have decided to write and tell you to protect our oceans.

And please do not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Sincerely,
